To Janet Gould
>One
>It had to be here somewhere!
>; Dr. Victoria Richards planted her hands on her hips >a~d turned a slow circle in the middle of the weather>grayed cabin's storage room. The sparks of gold >fighting the darkness of her brown eyes disappeared >when her thoughtful frown encompassed the boxes >plied everywhere. Well! ~ almost everywhere. There was >a bare spot next to a cot ~ and the shelves were half->empty.
>Darn it! She'd had that book just this morning. If >she could remember what she'd been doing before de>ciding to tackle the unpacking again! ~ she'd remember >where she'd left
it.
>You were silently swearing at the yo-yos who work >for the moving-and-storage company! ~ she reminded >herself. Somehow they'd managed to ship three boxes >full of old magazines instead of the cartons
