From Literary Times Gabrielle de Perricault needs a knight to lead her men. Though she is a capable leader herself, Gabrielle realizes her men will not willingly obey a woman. Gabrielle requires the assistance of a man to regain her lost home and rescue her kidnapped son. The man she turns to is Yves de Sant-Roux, marshal of the Count of Burgundy. She offers to marry Yves if he recovers her son and her home, making him lord of Perricault. The only condition to her offer is that they be married in name only-she does not want a younger son usurping her son's rights. Yves has no interest in land or titles. Likewise, he isn't desirous of a marriage in name only. It is only when he learns Gabrielle's son is in danger that Yves reconsiders. On his own since childhood, Yves knows the value of family. As the unwanted and unclaimed bastard son of Jerome de Sayerne, he has spent his life earning the respect of others. But the taint of his birth can never be completely erased and he has never truly had a home. As Gabrielle and Yves plan to recover her lost estate, their attraction toward each other grows. Gabrielle has offered Yves everything a man could want-but the only thing he wants from Gabrielle is her trust. Claire Delacroix continues the Sayerne series with a passionate tale of chivalry and love. Ms. Delacroix effortlessly spins a marvelous tale and readers will enjoy her latest offering. Another splendid tale from the pen of Claire Delacroix! A delightful read! Romance and chivalry are alive and well... Claire Delacroix brings them to life with a stunning talent for storytelling! Enchanting! My Lady's Desire continues Ms. Delacroix's memorable series-readers won't want to miss Yves's story! Kristina Wright, -- Copyright © 1998 Literary Times, Inc. All rights reserved
