I'm really in a growth industry," I thought Nina Fisch-man as she divided her phone messages into four separate piles. Now if only I could force myself to call any of these people back. She tucked a pile under each corner of her phone and spun her chair around to face her wall calendar.
It was April and "Wildflowers at the Waterfall" was the Sierra Club centerfold of the month. Poverty truly was a growth industry in New York these days and Nina's office was a reflection of the boom.
