In 1856, a Milanese print-publisher named Vallardi offered for sale 378 sheets of drawings reputed to be the work of Leonardo da Vinci. Bought by the Louvre, the collection was found to contain some 250 sheets of drawings by Pisanello.

Pisanello (13957-14567) was a painter of marked originality and the greatest of Italian medallists. Today he is singled out particularly for his masterful depictions of animals, a reputation which rests in part on the drawings of the Vallardi collection. In Pisanello's other remaining works -- two great frescoes, his paintings and medals--animals also appear, worked skillfully into the foreground and background. Many of the Vallardi drawings are studies for the animal figures of the larger works.
