With Love and a Pinch of Salt began as a notebook collection of recipes, poems, advice and household hints prepared privately by a mother for her only daughter approaching marriage.

Eventually the material grew into this volume for all brides, mothers, homemakers, and women everywhere "who want to be better than they are."

The recipes come from the author's own well-worn cookbooks and from sources long forgotten and they include nostalgic notes of their importance in the Sandberg family.

There is a wealth of quotable material on the home, child-rearing, creativity, happiness, housekeeping, decorating, and entertaining. Much of this is from Mrs. Sandberg's own pen and much of it has been collected through the years from a variety of sources.

Mrs. Sandberg believes that marriage and the Christian home ought to be exciting and creative since God has designed the home to be a beautiful picture of Christ's relationship with His bride, the church. Her ideas will encourage the reader to make motherhood and homemaking the fulfilling and happy vocation God intended it to be.
