"The protagonist is called David Brent because that is not his real name," writes the pseudonymous Paul Virdell in his Foreword to Mirror Man. "His real name is known to you--an international T.V. news personality and bestselling novelist. But for reasons that will doubtless become obvious, he has chosen anonymity..."

Here are the many, vaded and splendid erotic adventures of "David Brent," afoot in Wodd War 11 London, Paris and Rome; in radio-and-television network newscasting in New York and Washington; and in writing and living the life in the Lotus Land that was once Hollywood.

They comprise an explicit journey of passionate discovery and private obsession, a sexual odyssey from "Brent s" first instinctual desire through his initiations, quests, failures and fulfillments.

Sensual, comic, provocative, Mirror Man will have many guessing ... more importantly, all engrossed.
