Product Description

In recent years, memory has become a central, though also a controversial, concept in historical studies a term that denotes both a new and distinctive field of study and a fresh way of conceptualizing history as a field of inquiry more generally. Thinking about memory, as both an individual and a collective or social phenomenon, has drawn historians into debates about the nature of their own discipline, and into fruitful but sometimes problematic exchanges with practitioners of other disciplines (sociology, psychology, anthropology, literary and cultural studies, etc.) This book, which is aimed both at specialists and at students, provides historians with an accessible and stimulating introduction to debates and theories about memory, and to the range of approaches that have been taken to the study of it in history and other disciplines. In doing this, it makes connections between what are often disparate areas of scholarship dealing, for example, with individual memory, with groups as mnemonic units, with practices of commemoration, and with the wide variety of ways in which relationships to the past are socially organized, politically contested and culturally articulated. The book contributes in a wide-ranging way to debate on some of the central conceptual problems of memory studies: the relationships between the individual and the collective, between memory as survival and memory as reconstruction, between remembering as a subjective experience and as a social or cultural practice, and between memory and history as modes of retrospective knowledge.

Introduction; 1. History and memory: an imagined relationship; 2. History and the individual; 3. Remembering in society; 4. Memory and transmission; 5. Social memory and the collective past; Index.

评论

看了个大概，有必要再看一遍。
梳理得很清楚了。口述、书写与记忆的关系，记忆的传递，影响记忆的因素等等。重要的记忆理论也都有论及，不过涉及扬·阿斯曼的文化记忆理论不多。
