The Siberian Husky is a medium-size working dog. His characteristic gait is free and effortless, with great pulling strength. Pound for pound, he is the toughest draft dog in existence. It is as natural for the Siberian to work in a team of sled dogs as it is for a Pointer to point birds or a Beagle to run rabbits.

He has a moderately compact body. His coat is soft and smooth, with a downy, dense undercoat. His coat is of medium length, but the general outline of the dog is clear-cut, without shagginess. A mature male dog weighs between 45 and 60 pounds and a female between 35 and 40. Average height for a male is between 21 and 23~ inches; for a female, the average height is between 20 and 22 inches. His tail, shaped like a neat, furry brush, is carried in an open curve when running or standing at attention. It trails out behind when he is working or resting. When carried up, the tail does not snap flat to the back or curl to either side.
