Are you plagued with household disasters such as clogged drains, leaky faucets, sick vacuum cleaners, stopped-up toilets, sagging venetian blinds, wet basements and broken kitchen appliances--but you don't know much about home repairs and would like to avoid the expense of a professional repairman? Then this extremely helpful guide, based on one of McCall's most popular monthly features, will help you cope, even if you are a novice at fixing things.

Fifty-two common problems of household maintenance and repair are covered --simple electrical problems, plastering, painting, wallpapering, wall-paneling, tiling, carpet installation, refinishing furniture, getting rid of household pests, finding extra storage space, and much more. There are clear, practical, sensible instructions and tips, including the all-important advice on just when it is wise to give up and get professional help. For those who know nothing about tools, there are line drawings throughout describing which to use and how to use them.
