Oc rOBE~ 25, ~966 WAS AN OBDINABY FALL DAY. IT WAS CLF_, AB AND A bit warmer than seasonable for the South Shore of Long Island.

I was putting the finishing touches on a new school jumper for my slx-year-old daughter, Ginny, and I really had no inkling whatever that this particular day would become etched deeply in my memory.

In fact, the only unusual feature of the moment was that the house was quiet. Seven of my eight children were in school. The youngest, seven-week-old Boberta, was sound asleep. The children were due home shortly and I was savoring the last few minutes of silence, thinking about the family--considering each one-wondering what the future held.

Dan and I had been married twelve years. We were both in our early thirties and the first seven of our eight children were born about a year apart. The three oldest were boys, the others all girls.
