Songwriter, composer, lothario, philanthropist and half of the team that created the world famous smash-hit musicals "The Pajama Game" and "Damn Yankees" Richard Adler has been one of America's most beloved and creative musical figures for over thirty-five years. Here, in his own words, is his rich and rewarding life, an inspiring tale of the highest highs and the lowest lows, a marvelous journey through the quicksilver theater world and beyond that both defines and encompasses the golden age of the American musical. From his early days as a fledgling tunesmith scribbling out songs in a $60-a-month studio and pounding the pavements of Tin Pan Alley, to his fateful encounter with the man who would have been his life-long collaborator, Richard Adler recounts a career that has seen him weather four marriages; the sudden death of his partner Jerry Ross at twenty-nine; that of his son Christopher at a similar age; his own winning battle with throat cancer, and his concomitant spiritual awakening.

A moving memoir of deep-felt emotions, "You Gotta Have Heart" recalls Richard Adler's personal struggles and conflicts as well as his associations with hundreds of the best-known and best-loved luminaries in show business, among them Hal Prince, Bob Fosse, Jerome Robbins, Twyla Tharp, Marlene Dietrich, Gwen Verdon, Carol Channing, Mary Lasker, Carol Haney, Jack Benny, Harry Belafonte, Jimmy Durante, David Susskind, Cab Calloway, Hermione Gingold, Hal Linden, George Abbott, Shirley MacLaine, Cole Porter, Danny
