BELIEVE IT OR NOT, THERE ARE ADVANTAGES TO HAVING had cancer. When the bloodmobile folks come to town, for one, they're not the least bit interested in siphoning blood from you, even if you've got some rare blood type known only to God and six people on a remote island off the coast of South Carolina. Two, I get my mammograms at half price. Third, I've discovered one can get away with being a bit eccentric. If you decide to take up skydiving or transcendental meditation, for example, or suddenly become a vegetarian addicted to broccoli sprouts, people may think you're a little nuts, but they don't give you a hard time about it. They just nod their heads, peek at each other sideways, and whisper knowingly, cancer.

That's probably why my sister Ruth thought I'd be interested in those NewAge gizmos she sells in her shop on Main Street in downtown Annapolis when they've never particularly interested me before. She had just telephoned to say she'd be coming over with "a little something" to show me. I shuddered. The last time she'd
