It begins with a robbery, but quite unexpectedly, gets much worse suddenly, someone has been killed. For Charles Howard, the young, bright but troubled barrister, the case is a challenge: One of the robbers killed the man, but which one? Both his defendant and the man's accomplice contend it was the other--what they call in the trade a cut-throat defense. It s a classic legal dilemma, but no one has yet come up with a simple solution.

Charles must come to the trial with a very good game plan. But with his personal life in a shambles, and the added distraction of trying to save a young clerk from becoming the center of a sleazy Court scandal, he s forced to pull out all the stops to make it to the trial with his case--and his sanity intact.
