The most daring theft in history; the stolen object more explosive than an atom bomb, more valuable than the Kohinoor Diamond.

Deep within the Secret Vatican Archives lies a red leatherbound volume labeled "The Tetramachus Collection" whose contents will prove the Church's collaboration with the Nazis during World War II. Only a handful of people even know of its existence, among them a humble Polish priest named Father Martin Belobraditz, secretary to Rozdentsy Cardinal Meyerczuk, the living symbol of Catholic Poland's defiance of Communism and the man almost certain to become the next Pope.

When Father Martin arrives at the Court of the Belvedere, ostensibly to bring the papers to the cardinal, and then disappears with the Collection, an unparalleled manhunt ensues. Not only may the document topple the entire structure of the Church, but it will assuredly ruin the career and aspirations of Cardinal Meyerczuk, whose Faustian pact with the Germans the Collection explicitly sets forth. To the horror of the Vatican, the papers surface in the hands of Alfredo Sabatini.
