Pross thought that nothing could lure him back to the secret government espionage agency that once employed him as a fighter pilot. But when he is given the chance to be the first to fly the finest helicopter ever built, he has to reconsider.

So, against his better judgement, Pross accepts the challenge of test-piloting the top-secret hammerhead, a state-of-the-art aircraft as silent, swift, and deadly as the shark for which it was named.

But the first flight erupts into flame as hostile forces home in to annihilate this new threat to the balance of air power, and the Hammerhead is forced to show its awesome teeth.

So begins a pursuit that will jet man and machine halfway around the world, testing cutting-edge technology and Pross's own skill and courage to their furthest breathtaking limits.

Fans of Craig Thomas's Winterhawk and the film Blue Thunder take note: the hammerhead is one ride you'll never forget.
