Just dumped by lover Annie, impoverished Australian art dealer Essington Holt receives a propitious summons from his rich, elderly Aunt Eloise in France: Eloise wants Essington to recover some pricey Degas monotypes she owns that have been replaced with forgeries. Once at his aunt's Cap Ferrat villa, Holt runs into unscrupulous art dealers and hired ruffians before wrapping up the "real" bad guys. As unruffled narrator, Holt provides wry observation, witty asides, and a unique point of view--an Australian voice, but with a marked European accent. The plot briefly appears slightly confused near the end. For most collections.
