A resource for the clinical nurse preparing for the role of clinical educator on patient care units in a variety of healthcare settings, this practical and comprehensive publication offers guidance in understanding the roles and responsibilities of nursing staff development, orienting nursing staff to the clinical unit, developing unit-based educational programs, and helping staff develop as professionals. The book offers hands-on advice for assisting staff in developing as professionals, including helping clinical nurses share their expertise through publishing, oral presentations and posters; recording their professional achievements in a portfolio; preparing resumes and cover letters, getting involved in nursing research; and assisting staff in developing a clear career path. With its broad-based focus, this book is appropriate for all clinical nurses, regardless of specialty or setting, and not limited to oncology nurses.
