There are secrets that bind friends together... and secrets that tear them apart, in this riveting novel, four women--friends since their years together at an elite New England college--- find their lives suddenly and irrevocably altered by a past that comes back to haunt them, a secret that will not stay bidden. Especially now... as strange and ominous things begin to happen to:

SUSIE--an elegant society matron, married to a New York executive and living an ideal life, or so she thinks until her volunteer work brings her face to face with a man as irresistible as he is forbidden.

DINAH--a Connecticut housewife and amateur painter who, despite her moments of envying Susie's glamour, is reassured by her love for her lawyer husband and teenage son--and is blind to the betrayal in her own house.

LISBETH--a successful Hollywood screenwriter who has come back to New York to see her first stage play open off Broadway and to watch all her dreams--or her worst fears--come true.

QUINN--a brilliant research physician of blueblood Boston stock, immersed in her work, her spacious East Side apartment, her pet dogs, and her friends: if her life is so rewarding, why should her long-vanished brother's return matter so much--and why has he chosen to come back now?
