How does the world settle its differences, now there is only one superpower? What happens to leaders risking their credibility with sceptical publics? From events which have dominated international headlines for the last three years David Hare has fashioned both an historical narrative and a human drama about the frustrations of power and the limits of diplomacy.

Reality edited and rearranged plus imagination is devastatingly revealing. Brilliantly, brilliantly funny and eyeopeningly chilling.

Poignant esp. within the context of the Chilcot Report. beautifully written. intriguing plot. it's lovely to see the plot evolves and how the war was waged on excuses and ostensible intelligence. characters are distinctive and believing.

Stuff happens or to be accurate shit happens?
