Meredith Hooper's true-life adventure story of the race to discover the South Pole during the first years of the 20th century. The courageous teams led by Ernest Shackleton, Roald Amundsen, and Robert Scott competed to bring glory to themselves and their native countries by becoming the first expedition to reach the absolute most southern spot on Earth. The horrific failures of these teams and their final incredible triumphs are detailed here, from the planning of the voyages to the unexpected adversities.
