After losing her job and her girlfriend in the same day, Andrea "Andi" Kane goes home to San Antonio to rest and re-evaluate her life. But her relaxation is quickly disrupted when her grandmother tells Andi that she wants her to solve a murder that occurred sixty-five years earlier. The shock of the request is nothing compared to the one Andi receives when she discovers the convicted murderer was none other than her own great-grandfather. Andi's search will take her to HiHo, a small town in South Texas. Here, she meets a host of colorful citizens that includes the charming district attorney Janice Reed. As Andi struggles with rebuilding her life, she finds herself being drawn deeper into the rich and sometimes deadly mysteries of small town life.
