Of this volume, the noted critic Harold Bloom has written, ""A Coast of Trees" represents A. R. Ammons at his strongest and most eloquent in the lyric mode. The book is an achievement fully comparable to his "Uplands" and "Briefings." Among the poems likely to assume a permanent place in the Ammonsian (and American) canon are the majestic title lyric and 'Swells,' 'Easter Morning,' 'Keepsake,' 'Givings,' and 'Persistences.' Again Ammons has confirmed his vital continuities with the central Whitmanian tradition of our poetry, and his crucial place in that panoply."
