This student activities workbook facilitates students' understanding and application of major concepts and principles in the study of culture and psychology. Featuring a wide range of engaging case studies, the workbook includes 90 activities that run the gamut from mini-experiments to library research projects. These activities address topics such as culture, race/ethnicity, gender, age, sexual orientation, disability, and social class. Each one includes background information on the concept featured. In addition, the workbook is supported by a substantial Instructor's Manual that includes discussion questions, variations by course level, and suggestions for expanded writing.
