Her name was Terryn; his name is Morde. She hated him; he loves her. She died; he brings her back to life. The story of Terryn Dhalt is one of blood, death, vengeance, and salvation. Her life was wasted under the shadow of her boyfriend, Brent, and the seemingly untouchable street boss, Ends. Now that she has died, she must use Brent and get her crimson revenge on Ends for his hand in killing her and everyone she ever loved] but still there is Morde. To end her curse of a life and gain her eternal salvation, she must now walk a path that will end in her own permanent death and redemption, a path that meanders through the end of those she calls family and into close alliance with one who would murder her. She must go into Godas arms or her own insanity. The path is as red as her eyes.
