This set of three short novellas that builds in intensity to the title story recounts the blazing last summer of an artist possessed by such an irresistible sense of life and beauty that he extinguishes his own flame. Klingsor is a larger-than-life artist, a heroic walker, drinker, painter, and womanizer. We see him at the height of his powers, in the middle of his most creative period, and celebrating a sensual and creative life, a life lived outlining possibilities of existence far from a dreary slavery.
