H.G. Wells wrote a story called The Time Machine in the late 1800s. His main character traveled 10,000 years into the future to escape this world and find Utopia. Ernest Norman Paquin believes we can time travel into the past, back to the Garden of Eden, and instead of escaping this world, intervene somehow, to get rid of all knowledge of evil and set things right. Time travel has been investigated for quite some time, and some, like the author, believe it is possible. This story is an adventure that begins in the future, ends in the past and settles the present. It could also be the answer to saving this world and mankind.
