The plight of the new teacher has changed little during the last 30 years. Neophytes still confront the same conflicting demands - to foster the students' academic development while controlling their behaviour, often in crowded classrooms in ill-equipped and poorly administered schools. Thanks to five books, Isenberg (a 30-year veteran of urban classroom teaching) found solace and support. The five books are "Up The Down Staircase", "Teacher", "How Children Fail", "To Sir With Love", and "36 Children". As teaching narratives, these best-selling writings of classroom teachers are a precious legacy of wisdom, inspiration, and experience. "Going By The Book" is an account of the role of teaching narratives in the ongoing professional development of a working teacher. It also serves to illustrate the importance of shared stories in maintaining the will to endure in the teaching profession.
