Heir to an expat literary tradition that includes novels by Ernest Hemingway, Lawrence Durrell, Graham Green, Paul Bowles, and Penelope Lively, Oderman's Going combines a love story and an intrigue in a narrative of surprising twists that illuminate the moral quandaries faced by the main characters. In Granada, a boy in a dress begs in the white alleys of the old town. A runaway and vulnerable, he turns for protection to an American painter, Madeleine James, who is living in the city, and to her new friend, the poet Cy Jacobs. Although the two adults mean to help the boy, they unwittingly expose him to more peril. Soon, all the characters in the story have been scraped on the touchstone of hard realities and made to show their mettle, be it base or gold.
