There is some of the hero in every man, every woman, every child]even when we do not choose to be a hero. Huecos is set in far west Texas and spins its magic around such heroes]as well as outlaws such as John Wesley Hardin; Comanches and comancheros; and the notorious female bandit El Tigre, who is still talked about on dark nights in the adobe cantinas of Juarez on the Rio Grande. Into this world steps Jason T. Chadwick, soon nicknamed the Ghost Who Walks. And he finds himself confronted by not only the comancheros, but the great Indian chief Sitting Bull, a beautiful blonde from Philadelphia who thinks he has stolen her cattle, and the legendary El Tigre herself, who believes he has not only stolen her gold, but insulted her
