> Can Germans still claim a common identity after forty years of partition or are there now two different ways of thinking and living?

-- Peter Daniel, "The German Comedy", 1991

>> Carlo says he does not regard himself as East or West; he has no prejudice. Is that the future?

> Yes. European. I believe his is the generation which will just grow up thinking of themselves as Germans or Europeans. Even among the three children there is a difference. For instance, the little one - Elisa - goes to a school where the children learn Spanish and part of the lessons are in Spanish. For Elisa, Honecker, the GDR and The Wall have no meaning but Hitler somehow does. He is always there. He is in the newspaper everyday.

-- Heike Herrmann, interview, 2008
