While clearly assessing the achievements, performance and responses of major global south institutions to global change, Jacqueline Anne Braveboy-Wagner shows how and why such arrangements are critical in the South's efforts to call the international community's attention to their concerns and to resolve their special problems. Focusing on a range of key areas to provide the reader with a well-rounded understanding of this important subject in international affairs, this book: offers a rationale for the institutional development in the global South; elaborates on the scope of membership, structure, aims, and problems of such institutions; assesses the utility of tri-continental political and economic organizations; examines the history and activities of region-wide organizations; evaluates the potential of sub-regional integration arrangements; analyses the applicability of various theories; and, makes suggestions with respect to the study of global South institutions. The lack of a comprehensive and accessible compilation of institutions of key importance to the global South in the post-war period, makes this book essential reading to students and scholars in the fields of international organization, international politics, foreign policy, international development, and global south public policies.
