Goats on the Roof: A Life in Letters and Documents tells the story of Arshile Gorky's life through the letters he sent and received; the correspondence between his friends and family; and pivotal reviews and newspaper articles.

An intimate insight into this artist's often-difficult life, this group of letters and documents shows Gorky's struggle to be recognized, his devotion to his family and his connection to his Armenian heritage.

It also reveals Gorky's gradual reception by the art world through reviews from different stages of his career.

Compiled and with an introduction by Matthew Spender author of From High Place: A Life of Arshile Gorky this book is a uniquely personal insight into the life of the artist.
