This 2002 ALA Notable Children's Recording is a collection of stories and songs for peoples of all nations and races. It features six Iroquois social songs by the award-winning storyteller's husband, Micky Sickles. Traditionally, these stories would be told by an older relative, in the cold season, to teach the history, memories, culture, and values of the People to the next generation, while simultaneously reminding the older generation of the proper way to live in harmony with the Earth and all who share it. Dovie's 1996 recording, Lessons from the Animal People, was chosen as an ALA Notable Children's Recording in 1997.
