Grasshoppers, crickets, and other "non-aquatic" bugs make up an important part of a trout's diet, especially in dry times in late summer, and between major hatches of mayflies and caddisflies. Trout keyed in on terrestrials offer explosive top-water action that's as good as or even better than traditional dry-fly fishing. This new, original Orvis title helps the angler identify these insect species at streamside, and match them to artificial patterns. The results could be some of the most exciting fishing a fly caster might do all year.
