The final book in James T. Farrell's five-volume series on the O'Neill-O'Flaherty families, "The Face of Time" chronicles the slow and painful decline of Danny O'Neill's grandfather Tom and aunt Louise - whose deaths haunt "A World I Never Made". Featuring the family's experience with emigration from Ireland, "The Face of Time" brings the series full circle by evoking feelings of bewilderment, shame, and fear as the O'Neills embark on a new life in Chicago in the late nineteenth century.
