This novel is suitable for ages 9 to 12 years. Set in 1968, this touching novel tells the story of Sam Davis, a young man with cerebral palsy who peers through his bedroom window every day at the school he longs to attend. With great determination and the help of both his caretaker and his imaginary friend, Winston Churchill, Sam not only succeeds in gaining admittance and the acceptance of his peers, but fulfills his dream of becoming the school's basketball coach. The narrative, full of poignant insights into attitudes towards people with disabilities, provides a glimpse into the life of Winston Churchill, who is a key inspiration for young Sam.
