It's the year 777. A mysterious object falls from the sky at lightning speed and lands in Loch Tay, causing the earth to shake and souls to shiver. A priest finds it and discovers its awesome healing power; however, nefarious sources attempt to usurp it for their own selfish desires. In 1714 an event causes the British Empire to want to acquire this legendary object to quell a rebellion. Before the king could acquire it, fate steps in causing it to be lost for centuries. Over two hundred and fifty years later, an old hermit of the Cuillin Mountains discovers the legendary object and suddenly finds his life hanging in the balance. In 1973, he not only stumbles across a child lost in the hills, but also learns of a special connection to her. As time unfolds, and the child reaches adulthood, strange events start to occur. It is now that the old man must make sure the dangerous object never sees the light of day. But once again, history repeats itself, as he finds it has been taken. Is it now her destiny to undo the hermit's nightmare?
