Tulliver is a little rabbit who hates washing his face. Every morning and every night, his mother takes a damp cloth to his whiskers, and he hates it. One day, Tulliver decides he's had enough and leaves home to dig his very own burrow under a big oak tree at the far end of the field. But when nighttime comes, and Tulliver's burrow is not finished, a hungry, muddy, and miserable rabbit settles down to sleep. Maybe he's not ready to leave home after all? With its simple text and delightful illustrations, this playful yet reassuring story is perfect for reading aloud.
