Tomorrow. That's Doc's motto. Tomorrow she'll take care of the important things in life. Today she has everything she needs. That includes Sam, her partner--a constant, a given, a permanent promise. For eight years there has always been tomorrow to make their relationship official. Tomorrow is finally today. Forty-eight hours after Doc's realization that it's time to make a statement to the world, she and Sam are full of insane, impulsive plans to celebrate their feelings in a ceremony of love and commitment. With limited time, they arrive in Holland and hit the ground running--and promptly trip and fall. Dresses are only the start of the chaos. One catastrophe after another challenges an absent-minded idealist and a work-driven attorney to find their dream of forever.
