Body work and painting are often the most expensive and time consuming steps in restoring and preparing a collector car. This invaluable guide will help collectors make decisions early in the process, thus avoiding expensive, possibly fatal, mistakes later on. Gesterkamp's book covers the subject from basic body work through the many complications encountered by classic car restorers, and gives invaluable and expert help on a variety of issues, from how to match the original paint colour, how to maintain the paint job, and of course how to apply it. Written in step-by-step stages, with full-colour photos, and an engaging text this book is accessible to any car collector, and will be warmly received by them.
