"Children (and adults) will thrill to the beauty of the pictures and the tender concern of a child for her father." -- Kirkus Reviews Hana and her father used to love to walk in the garden and play their favorite game. But ever since tulip fever struck Holland, Hana's father has been consumed by greed, and now he is too busy even to kiss her good night. It is up to Hana -- with some help from a special family friend -- to find a way to remind her father of what's truly valuable. With stunning art reminiscent of Rembrandt, this tender tale illuminates the enduring love between father and child.
