Growing up, Olivia Cunningham always thought there was more to life than her small hometown offered. When her idyllic life falls apart during her senior year of high school, she eagerly flees to Chicago for college. It is not until later, after she has begun her career in the big city far from home, that she discovers she cannot escape her past. The small hometown she loved, the friends she used to cherish including the boy next door have all left their footprints on her heart. Unable to move forward, unable to go home, Olivia turns to a friend to help sort out the shambles of her life.
