Intraocular inflammation is still a major cause of visual problems. In this comprehensive, well-structured and lavishly illustrated reference book, numerous world-experts in intraocular inflammation share their vast experience with the reader. Reader-friendly structured chapters consist of a homogenous format, including core messages with clear concise description of the associated aetiology and diagnostics, leading to the most appropriate therapy. General Uveitis chapters (anterior, intermediate, posterior etc) support the reader with detailed and strategic information on flow-charts to identify any underlying disorders. The accompanying CD contains multiple case reports demonstrating the different courses of intraocular inflammation. This reference text will be a valuable resource for all physicians dealing with patients with inflammatory eye disease.
