Libby Meek is busy--too busy. Between art class and youth group, skiing and piano lessons, Libby discovers that she no longer has time to just play. When her parents ignore Libby's demands for more free time, she decides to go on strike to prove her point. Along the way, both Libby and her parents discover the importance of balancing work and play. Robert Rayner is a former elementary school principal in St. George, New Brunswick. His books include Falling Star, shortlisted for the 2008/2009 Hackmatack Children's Book Choice Award, Walker's Runners, nominated for the Ann Connor Brimer Award, and other Canadian Children's Book Centre Our Choice selections.
