Erica Swift may run the marketing department of Rockit Wireless, but she doesn't have a clue about tech. Thankfully, she has a computer-savvy assistant and hubby Lowell to help. All seems well until Lowell declares he's leaving her for Meryl, the president of his company. A stunned Erica moves back home with her mom while she figures out what to do. Rebuffing a friend's attempts to make her over as a trophy wife, Erica rents a condo, buys an MP3 player and GPS system, and upgrades her laptop. What does it matter if she doesn't have a clue how to use any of it? Over the course of this hilarious novel, Erica fends off the attention of some eligible millionaires, hits on a perfect plan to save the new product launch, and hones her abysmal text-messaging skills, all while learning to be a true modern woman in a wireless world.
