The key to correct Chinese pronunciation--through sight and sound In Mandarin Chinese, the word "ma" can mean four different things depending on the tone (the pitch)--"mother," "hemp," "horse," or "to scold"--even though the pronunciation is the same. If you are not a nativespeaker of Chinese, you may find this aspect of learning thelanguage daunting. McGraw-Hill's Chinese Pronunciationmakes it easier for you to pronounce Chinesewords correctly. You are first introduced to thesimple sounds; you then learn their combinations andcorrect tones. Vibrant illustrations in the book andvideo demonstrations on the CD-ROM even showtongue placement and mouth shapes to help you get the words right.
