This Classic picture book first published in 1924 by the legendary German children's book author, Albert Sixtus with lovingly detailed pictures by illustrator Fritz Koch-Gotha has been translated into English for the first time. It should appeal to all early readers and will also be a delight to be read aloud. The first day of school is here! This is the story of two young bunnies as they go off to Rabbit School, deep in the woods where they are taught everything a good rabbit must know. They learn about the tastiest vegetables and plants and how to make their garden grow; how to paint Easter eggs in bright colours so they can call themselves Easter bunnies. Their beloved old schoolteacher also teaches them to be fit and to run fast to avoid the dangerous red fox who lurks in the forest.
