"A poignant, truth-telling collection about what it means to grow up female in the rural Midwest where gender elevates or dooms a person. Readers will cheer for these ingenious women who survive hard lessons and exact revenge with a glee and courage that makes them irresistible "-Jonis AgeeThese women "challenge a parent's cold-heartedness, revenge themselves on hypocritical neighbors, announce prison records, infiltrate the Knights of Columbus. They are so much fun to read," Lisa Sandlin writes, "because they refuse to back down-and stand ready to accept the consequences.""We care about her beloved, vanishing characters in small towns and on nearby farms."-Josip Novakovich.Tricia Currans-Sheehan grew up in Iowa, where she teaches at Briar Cliff University.
