As the number of places left to be explored on Earth became fewer, explorers in the last century turned their interests skyward. This "final frontier" has been an important area of research ever since humans developed the ability to reach space. Humans in Space is an exciting new series that takes a revealing look at how "Earthlings" have defined their territory in the universe by pushing beyond the confines of the planet. Amazing futuristic images illustrate what future space exploration to Mars and the Moon could look like, from the space suits of the "Marsnauts" to the most recent ideas for lunar landers.
