Ralph Doudera, a money manager who handles hundredes of millions of dollars of his own and others' wealth, takes you along in this book as he struggles with wealth on his personal journey over the Class 5 Rapids of Mammon. A conundrum is a problem where the answer is very comples, possibly unsolvable without deep investigation. This book is for everyone who wrestles with the puzzles of wealth. Maybe they have too much money, or maybe not enough. It is a must read for those who raise money for worthy causes, and for those who need to give more. Once you pick it up, you won't be able to put it down as the author takes you from the crisis of the stock market crash on Black Monday to the filthy street of Calcutta, where he learned the true value of wealth from Mother Teresa. Not much is predictable here. Be prepared for surprises as you travel on this journey.
